MetroFibre is committed to bringing together the power of education and technology. Providing the connectivity needed to access the world wide web, and reach beyond the classroom.

Fibre connectivity creates sustainability and opportunity in so many ways for schools. We know that internet access provides the means for students and facilitators to improve academic performance, and promote research skills and critical thinking. It's so much more than just being connected - it's an opportunity to enhance education. It's also the primary way in which virtually all administrative functions, including school communications, are conducted.

In our technology driven world, we understand that access to online learning tools is critical, but we also realise that for many schools, internet connectivity is simply out of reach without some form of sponsorship or subsidisation. It's our way of supporting communities in which we operate and making a tangible difference to those who need it most.

As MetroFibre grows and acquires the critical mass on our network, it makes absolute sense that we reinvest in our communities and their future, and play our part to ensure that no one gets left behind – not at school, not at work, and not at home.

Investing in education, training and skills development is something close to our hearts. We are proud and humbled to bring connectivity to our schools in South Africa, and to be part of something positive and uplifting!
